Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies

BULLETIN No. 34

◀ TRAIL RIDE OF 1933 ▶ BY PAUL STANDARD

TEN years old and making its tenth annual ride! No wonder the embattled Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies were self-conscious. Their organization was at that inevitably awkward stage—too old to be treated as a child, and yet not old enough to qualify as a veteran. Then too the prospectus of the 1933 ride made them expectant. For had not Tom Wilson, that guide, philosopher, and father of Trail Riders (alas, no more!) just given the route his special blessing? In his little cottage in Banff, on the eve of the trek, Tom was recalling his memorable rides, and said, "Now of all the trails I have ridden, you are about to enter the region that has always been the loveliest for me. It is really my favorite, and I'm sorry I can't go with you."

With 8,200-foot Dolomite Pass as their shining goal the thirty-seven registrants tingled with anticipation but methodically proceeded by Brewster buses from the Banff Springs Hotel and from the Chateau Lake Louise, meeting some ten miles northwest of Lake Louise, just this side of Mosquito Creek. Here saddle horses, guides and the necessary pack ponies awaited the riders in the shadow of the giant firs. The Banff contingent's bus was a trifle late because of a flat tire which required changing enroute. This looked like a judgment, and increased their gaiety to the point where infant damnation crept into the talk. But the sight of horses and duffle and the business-like manner of President Jim Brewster and of brother Pat recalled the riders to their real job. By nine o'clock of Friday morning, July 28, the entire cavalcade was off on its four-day ride—a ride destined to be full of surprises, extensions, alterations; full also of continuous beauties and enjoyments.

In the party this time were the only three members who could say at the end of the ride that they had made each of the ten annual rides in full—artist Carl Rungius of New York, Colonel Phil A. Moore of Banff and Fletcher Brady of Providence. The first two are loaded with sufficient honors as ex-presidents of the Trail Riders; and Mr. Brady, though unloaded with scant respect from the back of his strawberry roan, was destined to rebound as an Honorary Member of the Trail Riders, thus joining the dignified circle that includes the King and Queen of Siam. But that's getting ahead of my story.

Proceeding easily through the deep forests and the numberless streams that wash past the base of Mt. Hector and into the Bow River, the riders came to a park almost a mile long. Here the trees, the shrubs, the grass, the wildflowers and the very trail itself became parts of a formal garden, an English park. Nature had outdone herself to show that she was capable of ordered intimate, geometric patterns as well as of rugged or stupendous effects. At the left of Bow Lake, some five miles ahead across the Bow River, towered three-toed Crow-foot Glacier, its 300-foot thickness appearing deceptively thin and incredibly near at hand. Skirting the western shore of Bow Lake the trail led on to the first camp on the lake's north shore, chosen for its impressive setting within a glacial amphitheatre composed of Cirque Peak, Mt. Thompson, Portal Peak and St. Nicholas Peak. Everybody dismounted and stretched out on the grass in the bright sun or in the partial shelter of the silver-glinting willow brush. The only case of feverish activity was that of Colonel Moore, who set up his tent while the cooks were getting lunch for the lazy rest of us. But some of those despised inactives proved more than a match for the Colonel when it came to eating lunch. This miracle recurred often enough thereafter to command wonder and respect.

After lunch the saner half (as they deemed themselves) of the party decided to stay in camp to laze and/or fish for the afternoon, while the restless and eager balance pressed forward on the eight-mile round trip to Peyto Lake. Some of the ponies didn't like the idea of further activity, among them the mount belonging to Fletcher Brady. But Brady hadn't been riding the trails these ten years for nothing. He strapped his horse and adjusted the cinch with a swagger that rarely comes in less than a decade. He set his left foot to the stirrup, whisked his right leg upward and his pony started, thereby flattering his rider into a false feeling of competence. For the cinch, being too loose by several holes, let the saddle slip and frightened the horse into sudden cavortings. Cries of "Ride 'im, Fletcher!" and "You got 'im cowed!" somehow failed to help the rider, who popped up and over the pony's right flank and landed in the soft willow brush, unhurt. He joined the party of stalwarts and with them stood on Bow Pass and viewed the deep blue of Peyto Lake and the commanding Peyto Glacier, which is part of the massive icefield bounding the Yoho Valley at its northwestern end. For fifty miles northward stretched the Mistaya Valley wherein lay Mistaya Lake and Waterfowl Lake dominated by Mt. Noyes and all bathed in the tenderest mist of pale blue. This was a time for silence, and all the Trail Riders appropriately lost their tongues for the moment. Returned to camp, they regained enough speech to extend a faintly superior brand of sympathy to the non-stalwarts who had missed the view. And at the evening campfire, after the portable organ's asthmatic throes had been stilled, the saga of "Strawberry Roan" was delivered by Wilf Carter, the yodelling cowboy. Having told of that steed's triumph over a rider, this cruel bard then sang his own ballad of that horse's taming at the hands of Harry Knight,

"A young boy from Banff
Who took a big chance

And rode old Strawberry Roan."

Thursday morning came, wrapped in several layers of fog blanket. President Brewster called a war council in his tepee, where it was quickly decided to remain an extra day in camp, thus making the ride five instead of four days long, and to continue with the scheduled route next morning. It rained, snowed, hailed all day, with brief intervals of sunshine. The poets in the party used their leisure profitably, devising lyrics proper to the occasion. Secretary-Treasurer Murray Gibbon worked out some verses to the tune of "Just a Wee Deoch and Doris" in praise of the Trail Rider who endureth all things; and ex-president Moore added a topical verse to "Fifty Years From Now," prophesying that we would then "travel through the mountains in a scow," presumably as promised of old to Abraham and his seed. Friday dawned equivocally, even threateningly. Another war council, deciding to alter the route somewhat, without missing its dramatic high points: the promised trip to the top of Dolomite Pass was to be made, returning in the evening to pass a third night at the Bow Lake Camp. This ride more than justified the claims made for it—outdid even the praise of old Tom Wilson. We followed a hairpin route, stopping for lunch just below the height of land leading to Dolomite Pass. At this lunch somebody took a treacherous picture of our Secretary-Treasurer feeding himself one sandwich with his left hand and reaching for another with his right; but he was merely getting that second one for a neighbor, who certainly did not allow Mr. Gibbon to eat it for her.

After lunch we climbed above the 7,000-foot level into a beautiful alpine meadow with a small glacial basin, Lake Helen, within it. Dan McCowan, riding far ahead, shouted that he saw something just beyond the lake, and Miss Elizabeth Booz called back to the stragglers that Dan saw some sheep on the icy crag. Nobody could see them, not even the sharp-eyed Douglas Hains. Asked to point them out, Miss Booz did so, but still they were invisible to the party. Here Miss Booz lost patience with Doug and the rest—until Dan himself was overtaken. "What's that?", he said, "I didn't say sheep—I said geese!" Miss Booz's stock declined sharply for a moment, but she was to win triumphant vindication at the Pow-Wow, where she became a vice-president.

With Ulysse Lacasse in the lead (he had previously resurveyed this trail) we rode along past Lake Helen, the bright sun bringing into sharpest relief the multiple snowclad turrets of Dolomite Peak, which grew in grandeur as we approached its 8,200-foot pass. We led our horses up the steep slopes over the strewn rock and finally crossed the pass itself, which still had a foot of snow upon it. The ponies breathed the cool air sweeping down from Dolomite Peak across Cirque Peak, and the riders walked out a couple of hundred yards to stand on the tip of the razor-back for a really breath-taking vista. To the southeast, fully eighty miles away, loomed the peaks of Mt. Assiniboine Park, the blue distance adding a haze of unreality to them all. Mt. Assiniboine itself, that Matterhorn of the Canadian Rockies, was visible—but only as to its lower half, the sharp, symmetrical cone being cut off by a fleet of clouds racing clear across the upper horizon. At our feet lay Lakes Helen and Katherine, dominated by Dolomite Peak. Suddenly a pair of eagles appeared from over the top of Dolomite Peak, floating lazily in the blue air, with scarcely a beat of their wings. The snow had not quite melted off the razor-back, and in places it exposed little patches of grass on which were scattered tiny pincushions of moss campion. Over one of the pincushions I caught a strange butterfly which Carl Rungius gladly accepted for his collection, saying it was the only one captured on this trip.

Returning, guide Lacasse led us by another trail through a thickly flowered Alpine valley to the lookout point on a shoulder of Cirque Peak whence the Bow Valley, Bow Lake, and the whole family of glaciers encircling the Yoho Valley were visible. Thereafter we cut across country back to camp, the ponies performing the customary miracle of making their own switchbacks down the steeper slopes. That evening the voice of the organ was again heard in the land, and all the riders having learned to sing with confidence, the volume of sound was heartening. Wilf Carter sang a yodelled version of "When the Moon Comes Over the Mountain," and that luminary obediently popped forth from among a maze of clouds. We felt we had by now achieved a measure of control over wayward nature.

Saturday morning started with another war council, which decided to alter the route, proceeding via Molar Pass and Molar Creek and pitching camp on the bank of the latter, a distance of some twenty miles for the day. We lunched in the shadow of Molar Mountain, and then made the steep climb up Molar Pass, much of this still covered with snow. Nevertheless, along the high snowy slopes the tiniest of forget-me-nots peeped timidly out to delight the riders. The descent down Molar Creek and its heavy growth of forest was quickly made, and high above the rush of cataracts floated the clear yodelling voice of Wilf Carter and the persistent strum of his guitar. He added his festive Swiss note to a setting which resembled a Switzerland suddenly grown more rugged and many times magnified.

Arrived at the campsite, our wizard cook Bert Hall started supper before the tepees were set up. "Unpack the cookstove, please," said Bert to his helper. "Sorry," came the answer, "but the pack-pony sat down on it." The pony just couldn't stand the rattle of its steadily shifting burden, and took this novel means of getting away from it all. Poor Bert said nothing. He smiled, fetched two large slabs of stone which he placed over the fire, and fried his bacon on the stone instead of the usual sheet-iron surface. His supper was a rousing success, an achievement, a pinnacle of some sort; but not for Bert—just in the day's work, nothing more.

The Sabbath was the fairest day of all, and we made short work of the remaining distance along the Pipestone to Lake Louise, where we arrived at the roomy Pow-Wow tent a little after five o'clock. Finding a real stove to work with, Bert Hall outdid himself. To speak of one dish only, his supernal clam chowder was poetry itself; it inspired one Trail Rider (name and status on request) to consume four bowls of it, scorning to touch anything else. Guests from the Chateau Lake Louise and from the Banff Springs Hotel motored up for the Pow-Wow, partook of the supper, sat in to hear the game little organ lead the singing, and to listen to Wilf Carter's tenth repetition of "Strawberry Roan," which the martyred Fletcher Brady seemed to enjoy more than anybody else. They heard the election proceedings whereby Mrs. Philip A. Moore became The Trail Riders' first woman president, Fletcher Brady becoming an Honorary Member, while the popular Wilf Carter was translated into higher life as official Trail Songster to the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies. That seemed almost enough for four—no, five days in the open.

JUST A WEE SONG AND CHORUS

Tune—'Just a wee Deoch an' Doris'

By the Secretary-Treasurer

I went upon a Trail Ride one day in late July;
There were five and thirty riders who went to do or die—

They were led by Jimmie Brewster, all riding in a row,

And pitched a camp and sang a song beside the lake of Bow.

Just a wee song and chorus, just a wee song or two,

Just a wee song and chorus to keep from getting blue;

There's a wee tepee waiting with boughs nicely set.

If you can sing round the campfire burning bright,

Then you're all right, you bet.

There were some of us old timers, and some of us were new;

There was Colonel Moore and Edmee and his wife so good and true,

And Carl whom all the girls adore, and good old
Dr. Gow,

And Wilf who sang us fifty songs like "Fifty Years
From Now."

We had a bronco buster, Fletcher Brady was his name,

And a Scotchman Dan McCowan fond of oatmeal and his dame;

Three lady Alpine Climbers, (including the celebrated Georgia Englehard,

Who stars in the moving picture entitled "She Climbs to Conquer"), and we wish that we had more,

For they always seem so happy when they aren't saddlesore.

Both Ann and Helen Harbison, Miss Sandman
and Miss Booz,

Each perched like Mrs. Harmon on a thoroughbred cayuse,

Joyce Yorak, Anne B. Evans, and Hammond sisters twain

All adding youth and beauty to this most imposing train.

The C.P.R. and Brewster crews were pretty nearly matched

In numbers like the fish that Carl declared he almost caught;

George Vaux and J. J. Kelly, Palenske, Freer Brock,

With Dr. Waser gave our Padre such a moral flock.

Along came Major Jennings with his comely lass Kathleen

Ariding up the mountain trails, who brought his own canteen;

He rules the Rocky Mountains Park, except the grizzly bears,

So please don't start a forest fire, and add to his grey hairs.

I'M SHAVING WITH TEARS IN MY EYES

Tune—"I'm Dancing with Tears in my Eyes"

Written at Bow Lake in tent 9 about the occupant of another tent.

I'm shaving with tears in my eyes
For the smoke in the tepee won't rise.

Shaving with tears in my eyes,
Shaving and heaving big sighs.

Why should I care,

I'm removing the air,

Staying in smoke clouded air,

I'm shaving with tears in my eyes

For the smoke in the tepee won't rise.

Vainly trying to comb my hair

As I gasp and struggle for air.

The smoke is getting much worse.

I thought last night

It would be all right

But this morning it is a sight.

FIFTY YEARS FROM NOW

By Ex-President P. A. Moore

Sunny Alberta weather is very hard to beat,

We travel through the mountains in rain and snow
and sleet;

And when we put our tepees up and try and sleep within,

The raindrops come atrickling down each tepee pole like sin.

We have web feet and water wings and use our ears for sail,

And travel through the sylvan glades like Jonah in the whale.

The horses have all turned to ducks, the riders
all to swans,

And float along in perfect bliss like goldfish in their ponds.

Oh, fifty years from now, oh, fifty years from now!

We'll travel through the mountains in a scow;
We'll float the blinking organ on a clipper-built toboggan—

Think of the nice sun-tan we'll get fifty years
from now.

"Tom Wilson, last of the Kicking Horse Pass trail blazers of 1881, crossed the final Great Divide on Wednesday." So read the opening of a telegraphic dispatch appearing in the Canadian newspapers of September 22nd, and though the news was not altogether unexpected, it caused widespread sorrow among his many friends and deep sympathy for his relatives. For Tom was one of the great characters of the Canadian Rockies, with a fund of anecdote based on experience which made him a wonderful companion. The Trail Riders paid their tribute to his unique record and personality by erecting a bronze plaque with his portrait in the Yoho Valley, which was unveiled by Mrs. Charles Walcott at the first Pow-Wow in August 1924. On that occasion Tom made a brief but typical reply to Mrs. Walcott's address. "I can't make an extemporaneous talk," he said, "except when a cayuse has stepped upon my foot," and then sat down.

Born at Bond Head, near Toronto, on August 21st, 1859, Tom Wilson was educated at Barrie, Ont., but went west in search of adventure at the age of fifteen. Eventually he joined the North-West Mounted Police, from which he resigned in 1881 to join the first survey party en route to meet Major Rogers at the head of Bow River. Throughout that summer he acted as guide for Major Rogers, returning in the following year to the survey party. In that year he was the first white man to see Lake Louise, and Emerald Lake, and to explore the Yoho Valley, and in those days of railway building through the Canadian Rockies handled the packing for the C.P.R. construction over the Kicking Horse Pass. In 1885 he joined Major Sam. Steele's Scouts and fought in several battles of the Riel Rebellion. He was present at the driving of the last spike of the C.P.R. at Craigellachie in 1885, and then settled down as guide and outfitter at Morley. Among his records as trail blazer may be mentioned the new trail he cut to Lake Louise for the C.P.R. in 1887, the trail he blazed to Mount Assiniboine in 1893, the trail to Lake O'Hara made with Walter D. Wilcox in 1895, the clearing of the old Indian trail to Emerald Creek and the cutting of trails to Emerald Lake and Wapta Pass in 1897. In the same year he guided E. J. Duchesnay to the Yoho Glacier and was largely responsible for the development of the Yoho Valley as a tourist objective in the succeeding years. Tom Wilson cut the first trail to Moraine Lake in 1900. He accompanied Edward Whymper, conqueror of the Matterhorn, on his survey of the Canadian Rockies in 1903, and was recognized as the outstanding pathfinder, guide and outfitter of these regions.

It is worth while recording that the Indian Day celebration at Banff was started by Tom Wilson in 1894 and carried on for seven years at his own expense, and that he was one of the founders of the Alpine Club of Canada in 1906.

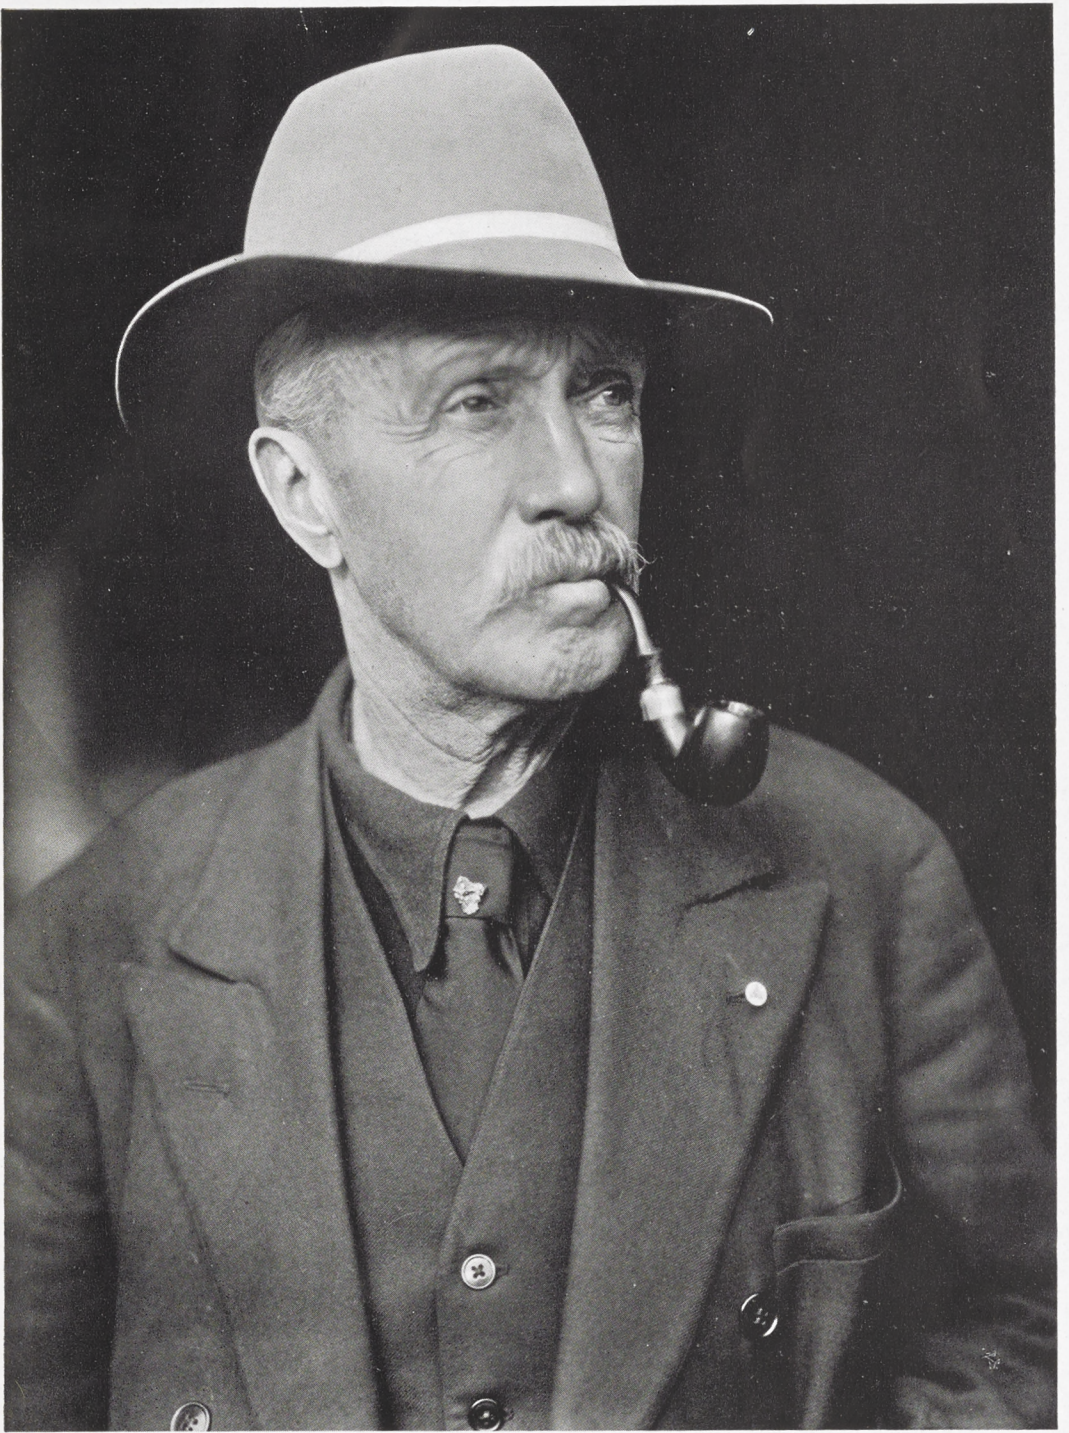

His interest in the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies was very great, and if life had been spared he would have taken just as keen an interest in the Sky Line Trail Hikers, to whom he gave his blessing when the new Order was organized last August. His correspondence with Alpine climbers, explorers, hunters and fishermen, trail riders and anyone interested or likely to be interested was enormous, and there were many people to whom the name of Tom Wilson was synonymous with that of the Canadian Rockies. His end was not unexpected, for he had been ailing for several years, but he will be sadly missed.

Trail Blazer and Trail Rider of the Canadian Rockies

Who Crossed the last Great Divide, September 20, 1933

Read and approved.

Financial Statement:

Cash on hand.....	$ 589.48
Investments.....	2,500.00
Net assets available.....	3,089.48
Plus buttons and brooches on hand assessed at sale price of.....	$ 1,770.60

The Secretary explained that there were many members who had not yet paid back dues, but that the recent calls had been effective and that the names of those who stated they were no longer interested had been deleted.

Dominion Government Bonds:

The Secretary-Treasurer was authorized to convert the $2,500 invested in Dominion Government Bonds into the new issue anticipated as likely to be made by the Dominion Government under a Conversion scheme. While the interest under this scheme might be reduced, it was felt that the Trail Riders might show their appreciation of co-operation rendered by the Government in the development of trails by supporting this Conversion issue.

Slate of Officers:

This was discussed and agreed upon. List of Honorary Members increased to make room for younger members and list of Council Members reduced. See page 20.

Route of 1934 Trail Ride:

In view of the experience of 1933 Trail Ride it was decided to hold the ride in 1934 at a place where the same camp could be used for two successive nights. Ice River Valley offered this possibility, so route selected was from Leancoil to Marble Canyon by way of Ice River Valley and Wolverine Plateau, ride to last four or five days, according to decision to be arrived at later.

Extra Day 1933 Trail Ride:

Provisional decision made on the second day of the Trail Ride to stay in camp and give the Riders benefit of an extra day without charge, on account of storm conditions, was approved.

Wilf. Carter:

Recommended as Official Trail Songster and Honorary Member.

Votes of Thanks:

To be conveyed to: J. B. Harkin, J. M. Wardle, Major Jennings, Pat. Brewster and Guides, Dr. Gow and Reginald Townsend.

The Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies owed so much to the practical interest and generosity of the late Mr. H. B. Clow that the news of his death was received with very sincere regret. It was owing to a suggestion of Mr. Clow, who already had made the trip, that a party of riders set out from Lake Windermere in the summer of 1923 to cross the Canadian Rockies to Banff by way of the Wolverine Plateau. He had told the writer that this was the most wonderful alpine trail he had ever ridden, and produced photographs of a tremendous wall of rock capped by hanging glaciers as evidence of his contention.

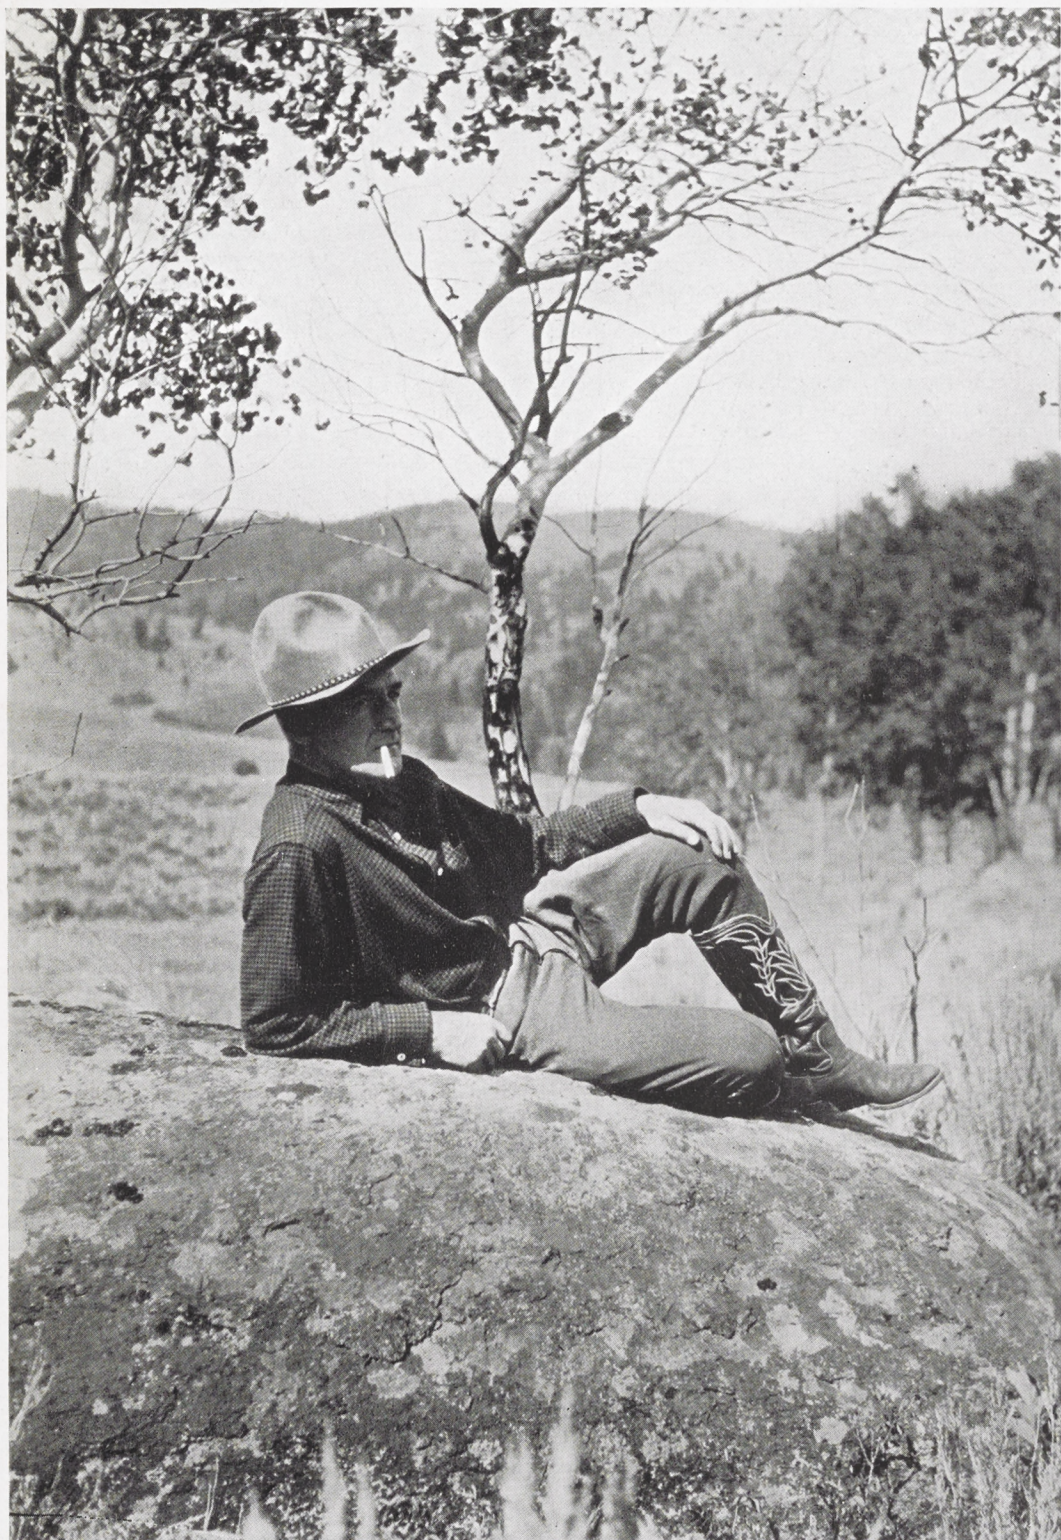

The party consisted of Reginald Townsend, Mrs. Townsend, Byron Harmon, R. H. Palenske, H. Armstrong Roberts, and the writer, with Walter Nixon as guide, assisted by Madeline Turner, and under the inspiration of the marvelous scenery of the Wolverine Plateau the idea of establishing an order to be called the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies was born.

One of the first to whom the news was communicated was Mr. Clow, and at once he wrote that he wished to be considered charter member and to contribute whatever we desired. The result was that he undertook to have his map-makers compile a map of the National Parks of Canada in the Canadian Rockies showing every existing trail, and to donate this to the new Order. The cost of compiling this map totalled several thousand dollars, for no expense was spared in making this complete and reliable. The late Dr. Walcott, Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, told the writer that when it was printed he exhibited this map at Washington as a model of its kind.

Mr. Clow's interest in the Trail Riders did not cease with this magnificent gift. He personally attended the Pow-Wow at Wapta in 1925, and always was prompt in remitting his annual dues, sending a friendly note with his cheque. While his many other interests made it difficult to come to the Canadian Rockies every year, he made several camping trips within the last ten years.

Mr. Clow had an enthusiasm for the outdoors which was very infectious, and many were induced to come to the Rockies as a result of hearing him talk and seeing his photographs. He was a man of great personal charm, and we feel that in his passing the United States has lost a wonderful citizen, and Canada mourns a true friend.
